

Normandy Village P.M.

As night fell on D-Day, the village was reduced to rubble. Any rubble and remaining buildings count as Very Difficult.

The cobble road through town is a major thoroughfare. Wide and paved, it offers vehicles more room to pass.

There are some walls remaining after the bombing. These walls are Difficult.

Outside of town lie woods and rolling hills. The entire woods (each denoted by a place marker with a couple of trees) count as Difficult. The rolling hills also count as Difficult.
