

The 10th Guards Uralsko-Lvovskaya Tank Division, also known as the Ural-Lvov Tank Division, is headquartered and based at Boguchar, around 100 miles south of Voronezh, Voronezh Oblast. Its full designation is the 10th Guards Tank Ural-L'vov the Order of October Revolution Red Banner the Order of Suvorov and the Order of Kutuzov Volunteer division in the name of Marshal of the Soviet Union R. I. Malinovskiy. It is an armoured division of the Russian Ground Forces and part of the Moscow Military District's 20th Army, under the command of Lt. General Andrey Tretyak. The division traces its lineage back to World War II.

The formation was initially known as the 30th Uralskaya Voluntary Tank Corps when it was formed in April 1943 in the Ural Military District. Workers from the Ural tank factories were among its initial soldiers. The Corps has the distinction of being entirely paid for by the donations of the population of the Urals. This included its entire complement of the T-34 tanks built by the Urals factories. Between 1943 and 1945 it took part in the Orel, Bryansk, Proskurov-Chernovits, Lvov-Sandomir, Lower Silesia, Upper Silesia, Berlin, and Prague Offensive operations. In October 1943 it was honoured and renamed the 10th Guards Uralskaya Voluntary Tank Corps. It finished the war in what is now Poland and briefly became part of the Northern Group of Forces.
